SAINTS DEFEAT MAROONS AFTER TWELVE INNINGS

St. Louis 7, Chicago 6.

A poor start usually means a great finish, at least it is usually this way in baseball, and that is just what happened at Moiliili Field yesterday afternoon with the St. Louis College of Honolulu baseball team and the University of Chicago baseball team supplying the snuff of war. After the two teams had pulled off a lot of fan-riding and nice long fungo hitting in the practice preliminaries, Umpire Stayton gave the sign to play ball.

Chicago went to bat and when they had taken a whiff of the ball, nearly everybody on the lot sat back and said "Oh Piffles." Francis Brown, having for the Saints as well as a home, Third Baseman Swan mused up a chance to make a pretty double play and Albert Akana gave the ball a kick. A couple of bingles sandwiched in gave the Midway stars a trio of runs and it looked like curtains for the blue and red bedecked sons of west from St. Louis.

Then the Saints woke up and for the next eleven innings played ball such and neck with the Maroons and when the winning tally crossed the plate, amidst a cloud of dust and tangle of players, everybody present just stood up and cheered, for the game that started so badly had turned out to be the greatest exhibition of the national pastime every staged on a Honolulu ball yard.

The Saints had knotted up the score in the second inning on three nice little hits—a couple of bingles by "Pat" Piffle and a sacrifice by Schuman. Up to this moment a feeling of good fellowship existed between the two teams, but with the scoring of those three tallies all signs of friendship fled. Francis Barney waddled over to the coaching line and started to ride Manager Page. Pat complained to the umpire that Barney was charged to the bench only to have Piffle go forth and begin to kick Pat's dog around. For a moment things were serious but the tall tale, Paul Des Jardien poured oil on the troubled waters and a truce was declared, only to spring up in the next inning and every succeeding inning.

It was a scrappy, gully and peppy game without a dull moment and with the big crowd home to late supper without a murmur.

Picking out the stars means everybody played baseball and the score will prove that. The score follows:

FAMOUS POLO PONY IN SERIOUS SHAPE

WAILUKU, Maui, September 4.—Carry The News, the famous polo pony who for several years has been rated one of the world's best and who participated in the English-American match in the East two years ago is seriously ill at Puenene. He became sick Wednesday and rapidly grew sicker, and for a time his life hung in the balance.

There was a slight change for the better Thursday, according to Doctor Fitzgerald, who has the horse in his care, but Carry The News is still in bad condition.

HAWAII TRIM MEIJS

Locals Outfit and Outplay Visiting Ball Players From Japan

Meiji suffered another defeat in the hands of the local ball-players yesterday, the Hawaiis of the International League, turning the trick by a score of 8 to 3 by outhitting, outfielding and outplaying the visiting team. Ten hits, three of which went over the fence for homers and a triple by the Hawaiis causing most of the trouble for the Meiji pitcher.

In the second contest of the afternoon, the Chinese athletic club and the Portuguese athletic club played a seaway game, there being eighteen runs, twenty-three hits and twenty-one errors made by the two teams.

A small crowd witnessed the double header.

MAROONS ANXIOUS TO MEET SAINTS AGAIN

Without endeavoring to take any of the credit away from the Saints for their victory over the Maroons last Saturday afternoon, the Chicago University team is anxious to meet their conquerors again and are confident they can turn the tables.

A. L. Castle, representing the Maroons, was in communication with Manager Schuman of the Saints last night but the latter declined to give a definite answer until today.

That another game between the two teams would greatly please the fans can not be denied, and it is hoped Schuman will round his men up and again play the Maroons. Chicago is the best college team to visit the Islands, bar none, and the victory of the Saints was a great one. Nevertheless, the defeated are always entitled to another chance and the Saints should accept the offer of the visitors. Chicago is willing to play the game tomorrow. Today they meet the Chinese at Moiliili Field. Wednesday they play the First Infantry at Schofield Barracks and Friday they leave for the Orient.

PALAMA BASKETBALL TEAM AGAIN WINNERS

In the final game of the series between the Palama Settlement girls basketball team and the Wailuku aggregation at the Palama Settlement gymnasium last night, the former were easy winners, the final score being 41 to 15 in their favor. Both teams were the regular quintets and despite the largeness of the score, the game was a good one. Palama though showed the best team work and in the second half scored 20 to their opponents 11. The score at the end of the first half was 15 to 13 in favor of Palama.

Following the basketball game, the floor of the gymnasium was cleared and the balance of the evening was spent in dancing.

COOPER WINS FIRST TWIN CITIES DERBY

(Associated Press by Federal Wireless.)
PORT SNELLING, Minnesota, September 5.—Driving his automobile at an average speed of 86.35 miles an hour, Earl Cooper finished first in the inaugural Twin Cities Derby at the Speedway here yesterday, less than one second ahead of Gil Anderson. Eddie O'Donnell finished third. Cooper's time for the 500 miles was 5 hours, 47 minutes and 29 seconds.

SUGGESTS GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP OF TEAMS

Some novel ideas are being advanced in connection with the proposed reorganization of the South African Baseball League for 1916. One plan calls for a $2,500 appropriation from each city represented, together with the assurance that at least 1100 season tickets at $5 each will be sold before the club signs its players for the season. In return the club agrees to play free baseball every day in the week except Saturdays and Sundays, when a nominal admission charge will be made. Municipal parks and there are not new, but baseball clubs under practically the same classification are a bit advanced, to say the least. It may, however, be the forerunner of government ownership of the big leagues.

ROBERT GARDNER WINS AMATEUR GOLF TITLE

(Associated Press by Federal Wireless.)
DETROIT, September 5.—In the final match for the amateur golf championship, played here yesterday on the golf links of the Detroit Country Club, Robert Gardner of Chicago defeated John Anderson of New York. Gardner won in 56 holes, five up and four to go.
Jerome D. Travers and Francis Quinnet, both of whom were expected to compete in the finals, were eliminated in the early stages of the tournament.

SUBMARINES RUN DOWN AT MOORING

Naval Ship 'Supply' Gets Beyond Control and Crashes Into Little Craft

With 'F-4' a Hulk, Entire Flotilla Stationed Here Is Out of Commission

Buckled Up Like a Fan
Forced down, as well as in, the F-2's rudders swept under those of the F-3, the next submarine, giving the latter a bad list; and her gear, in turn, became entangled with that of the F-1, next to the barge, so that she was raised a foot or eighteen inches from her normal waterline. She also listed.

Thus the three ships were like the leaves of a fan, with their sterns tangled at the center, and the bows spread out, also like a fan. The F-2 was the lowest in the water; then came the F-3, in relative position, and lastly the F-1, nearest the barge and highest in the water.

As they were pushed into the barge it sprang up and back, giving way where the wharf would not have given. At the same time the bow moorings parted, and the bows of the boats spread further apart, again like the opening of a fan. The F-1, thrown against the barge, was stove in slightly on the port side, aft of midships.

Men of the flotilla swarmed from the Alert and upon the submarines and pulled their bows inshore. The F-2, the outside submarine, was freed quickly from the grasp of the F-3, but it took longer to free the F-3 from the F-1. It was accomplished half an hour after the mishap, her ballast tanks being flooded to lower her in the water. All the submarines soon were floating properly.

Lieutenant Crittenden soon was notified and went to the scene. Fred Buss was called should the naval crane be required.

The accident occurred so quickly that, except for the men of the flotilla, few ashore knew of it. The Supply was headed in the channel, got out of her course through her engines failing, and struck, but she was on the wharf or on the street at the end, he would not have been aware of the collision. A small crowd was at the entrance to the wharf; a light-colored ship that was going to hit; and she hit on the wharf. The AMT already was swarming with men running to the submarines. Passengers of the Supply were keenly interested, of course, but there was no great excitement aboard the ship.

Captain Henderson said that the engines of the Supply, one of the oldest ships in the navy, had been in bad shape, and that she was on her way to the Coast for repairs. She is a single-screw vessel, which makes her harder to handle than if she were twin-screw. A radiogram had been sent, asking for a tug to meet her outside, and the Navajo started out, but was ordered to stand by at the entrance to the harbor, off Quarantine. This the Navajo did, ready to help the Supply.

Noes Through the F-2

As is customary, the ship came in under headway, with engines shut off, but with enough motion for her to answer the rudder. She passed the lighthouse well, but, as she came further in, it was apparent that something was wrong, as she steadily neared the submarines. The engines had been ordered backed, so as to throw her head toward the Navajo's ship, the customary maneuver in handling a ship, but, as stated, they did not respond. All that remained was dropping the anchors, and they slid into the water, but the slow progress of the Supply was not halted until she had nosed through the light superstructure of the F-2.

Assisted out by the Navajo and a power boat, the Supply hoisted her anchors and was swung toward the Navajo's ship, but again she had trouble. This time with her winches, and, except for a few minutes, when she had some power, she was taken in and moored by hand, which meant the straining of scores of men on the mooring lines. She moved by inches, and it was almost an hour after she had struck the submarines before she had come to rest.

Link Blocks Stuck

"Technically, the link blocks stuck," said Captain Henderson. "He said he did not believe there was enough tide for a current setting out the channel to have bothered the ship any."

"We are all right so long as the engines are kept moving, but shutting them off meant trouble," he explained. After being repaired, the Supply is expected to return to Guam as station ship.

Capt. Richard Nelson, government pilot, was on the bridge with Captain Henderson.

The mishap was reported immediately to Admiral Clifford J. Boush, commandant of the naval station. It is presumed an investigation will be made at once. Present plans for the Supply are that she is to sail Thursday.

The Young tug Makala was called to help clear the submarines.

While starting the engine of the Young tug Makala yesterday afternoon, preparing to go to the aid of the Supply, Roy Palmer, employed by Jack Young, was struck by the starting bar of the gasoline engine, and his left eye destroyed. It was removed in an operation at the Queen's Hospital by Dr. William G. Rogers, eye specialist, and Dr. Edwin D. Kilbourn.

Besides the loss of an eye, many teeth on the left upper side of the jaw were knocked out by the blow, and the nose was fractured. Palmer was resting well last night, with a good pulse, but he is not out of danger.

No one was present when Palmer was injured, but the accident must have occurred while he was starting the engine. Palmer is twenty-nine years old and is the brother of Frank C. Palmer, superintendent of the United States light-house service. He resides at the Young bathhouse.

SUBMARINE COMES BACK LIKE GHOST

MILAN, August 23.—Without food, without sleep, without supply of oxygen rapidly diminishing, the commander and two of his comrades dead, the crew of an Italian submarine labored for seventy hours on the bed of the Adriatic to repair the machinery of their craft, set the engines in motion and in the end reached their base.

This is the tale of heroism that sent a wave of enthusiasm over the country. A week ago an official statement from Vienna said an Austrian submarine had torpedoed and sank the Nereide, one of Italy's newest submarines. The Nereide failed to return to her base, and the minister of marine was inclined to accept the Austrian statement as true and to place the craft and her crew on the navy's casualty list.

The Nereide was attacked by an Austrian craft as Vienna told. The Nereide's commander had distinguished the flight of the speeding torpedo toward him and swung the diving level hard. The Nereide responded to the action of her rudder so quickly that the torpedo passed just above her, but the strain on her mechanism was so great that when she was brought again to the horizontal it was found her motors were out of condition.

Fervently the crew sought to repair the damage. The failure of the motors threw the weight of the current used by the electric bulbs onto the storage batteries and these soon became exhausted.

The men lost trace of time. Once they obtained a few revolutions of the screws and a faint, husky cheer used up more of the precious oxygen. But their exhilaration was brief, for the motor stopped again and the work had to be done over.

Two more men collapsed and were barely kept alive when the chief engineer found the seat of trouble and at length repaired it. The motor started once more. Slowly the shell began to rise from the bottom. The periscope reached the surface and found a clear sea. Out of the water came the hull, and half of the conning tower was opened for the first breath of air in three long days. But it was too late, for three more men were in collapse below. They died without regaining consciousness. Two more men died on the way to port.

Obtaining his bearings, the navigator steered his course for a base on the Adriatic coast, and yesterday the Nereide, running awash, appeared among her flotilla, a ghost from the sea. The news was flashed to Rome and to the naval ships afloat:

"The Nereide sunk; is risen again."

CANNERY AT KAPAA ENDS FIRST SEASON

(Mail Special to The Advertiser)

KAPAA, Kauai, September 2.—To day the pineapple cannery, opened on June 15 of this year, closed down temporarily after its first season, which has proved most successful. Eighteen thousand two hundred cases, each containing twenty-four cans, are stacked in the store room ready for shipment. This is the largest output for the first season from any cannery in the Islands.

The actual erection of the building began in April of this year, and the latest machinery was installed as soon as possible. There have been practically no hitches or accidents during the three months the work has progressed smoothly and efficiently. Aluminum boilers, can manufacturing apparatus and excellent curing, paring and labeling machines are among the features which put the concern in the first class.

The fruit has been obtained from the Kapaa homesteads and the presence of the cannery has greatly increased the value of the land nearby, much of which cannot be used for cane growing, but is excellent for the raising of pineapples.

The finished product is of a high order, and is kept up to the standard by careful testing. The greatest care has been exercised in regard to cleanliness, the employees having worn rubber gloves in all their work and the entire establishment having been scrubbed daily with a lime solution. Wood is utilized for fuel, but the management hopes that oil will be practicable at a later date. Kealia and Lihue are the shipping ports, and the output is already contracted for.

Albert Horner Jr. has been manager for his father, Albert Horner of Honolulu, and he has lived in Kapaa during the season. He has employed expert help and feels well satisfied with the season's results. The next season will begin in December, when the establishment will be run on a much larger scale.
